Robson, William

To Francis Jackson Garrison

«Warrington, England» The writer says the English think the South should have the right to choose its form of government. Says the North has no right to "interfere by force of arms in the government of the South." Deplores the Northern worship of the ideal of the Union. Says a long war will dampen Northern enthusiasm for the Union. Conquest of the South is an impossibility. Discusses the Canadian Revolution of 1837. Speaks of the overwhelming military power of the North. Regrets that the Abolitionists have sunk from the level of "Universal Men" to that of Americans. Criticizes the action of the American officials in the San Jacinto case.

To Worthington Chauncey Ford

[New York] "The enclosed ridiculous menace" belongs with the Weston papers. "Our W L G [William Lloyd Garrison] collection contains one or two instances, but the multitude have gone the way of waste paper." Suggests, in the absence of a clue to the date, that it looks early, perhaps in the thirties, "before postage stamps anyhow."
A.L.S. 1 p. 8 3/8 x 5 1/2 in.

Refers probably to No.48 in this volume.

To Worthington Chauncey Ford

[208 Broadway, New York] The writer thanks the addressee for letting him see Miss Weston's letter, and is curious to see how he has coped with the mass of manuscript material. "The [Amos Augustus] Phelps contingent" would interest him most. Comments on the depositaries of Anti-Slavery material; Oberlin, Howard University (Library of Lewis Tappan); [John Greenleaf] Whittier's "holocaust of his accumulation" due to unwillingness to revive the controversy, as detailed in Vol.2 of William Lloyd Garrison. Mentions with doubt or denial of their existence, the preservation of papers by General William Birney, Joshua Leavitt, Elizur Wright. Though these would be valuable for local color, "[illegible]ing has turned up to alter essentially the tenor of ou[illegible]rrative of facts."
